

Abstract

A converter, comprising at least means for sensing the currents fed to the electric motor powered by the converter, 5 the means for current detection being situated inside the converter, and the signals of the means being fed to a nonlinear filter, whose output signals are fed to an additional filter that is connected to an analog-to-digital converter.